“ My condolences, to Daryl's family, Despite his struggles, he was a good man which I had the pleasure to call my friend. He would often visit my house when he was in the area, always riding his bike which he loved to do, he was a great artist, a Mr. Fix it, I know fishing was one of his hobbies, he would always tell me the stories with great excitement in his eyes, he didn't have a whole lot but helped me out when ever he could and when he did he did whole heartily he gave from his heart I know another passion of his was working on cars, and motorcycles he loved to fix em up like he knew how for other people. I can remember many of times just shooting the breeze with him and listening to him tell his stories from his younger years while listening to his heavy metal music All the career paths he set out on. I always found him an interesting person, for this man went through a lot and was still here to tell his story, another thing I can also remember about him was his love for his pets, seemed like he always had a little companion with him until he started getting ill himself, I was surprised one day when I walked into my fathers hospital room, and discovered, he was my fathers roommate, out of all people, but it was good to sit and chat with him. He was well known in the homeless community, cause he was always there lending a helping hand. I had much respect for Daryl, he always seemed to overcome life's ups and downs no matter what he always landed on his feet. Well Goodbye my friend I hope you are resting in Paradise. Gonna miss ya brother!
