My son Dylan was a very special young man. He was known for his big big heart. He loved to help others and to let people know he cared. He was not fake. He was the real deal. When he was born I knew how special he was and never realized how much he would have a positive impact on others. He was a very hard worker and tried very hard every day to do better for himself. His hobby was music. He wrote and made music AKA Don Pablo. He started when he was 13. He was very talented and had a very extensive vocabulary. He had a total of 15 to 20 songs that he had done and had been in touch with the music people out of California. Music was his passion, his dream. My son had very many talents. His music and big heart will always be remembered. He was fierce.
