“ I can still hear my grandmothers laugh, I can hear her voice; " oh Angela" because I just did something that she would say was crazy. I miss my grandmother, so much I loved to talk to her for hours. I did the best I could to make things right with her. So I don't have any regrets, just loving memories of her being apart of my life. I will never forget the day I went into her room, she was laying on the bed like any other time I would go in there . My grandmother would usually wake up with a startled jump and say oh Angela. I kept looking at her and she never moved or woke up. That was hard to see. I am thankful my grandmother was apart of my life for as long as God let her be. I am glad that she is not in pain or hurting anymore. My grandmother was a really strong woman she worked very hard at the hospital, out in her yard, and putting together dinners for the church people . I learned a lot from my grandmother. Its like she is not gone for real because my brother and I talk about her all the time. My favorite time with my grandmother is when she would pick me up from work and when she came to visit me in my classroom. I will always love my grandmother!
