“Our loving thoughts embrace you during this difficult time.”. May God give you the strength to continue with your life. Your selflessness took a lot out of you and now you need to take the time to build yourself up and find your self again. Perhaps starting a journal to express all about the love you shared would provide a great outlet to continue the never ending journey of your lives. It would be like writing him a love letter every day to make it easier as time goes on. Virginia
