“ To my God brother, it hasn't really hit yet that your presence will no longer be at all the family gatherings. You were the only boy cousin until Jason came along that had to deal with all us girls. You were our protector and our safe space. I remember you gave me my first taste of liquor, I think it was a box of Matilda bay wine coolers. You took me to take my driving test to get my driver's license, sneaking me into the clubs when you were a bouncer. You were the original dog whisperer, I never knew a time when you didn't have a pet dog. You were an excellent cook and had so much talent in every instrument you played, and dont get me started on that beautiful voice of yours. Im going to miss seeing you sitting behind your dj booth playing all our favorite jams or picking up that mic singing your favorite country song. I will miss that deep laughter of yours and those big bear hugs I get when I haven't seen you in awhile. I love you cousin

“ My papa bear, where do I even begin. You were such a big, beautiful light in our lives. All the memories I have with you are full of laughter & joy. Being your daughter has been one of the greatest roles I've ever had. You told me I am the matriarch and I need to watch after Chae, RJ, Anthony, & Alex. I promise that I will always be there for them & all of their beautiful babies. I'll keep an eye on Kristie, Grandma, and Auntie too. Most of all, I'll make sure my boys knew their papa loved them. I'll share all my memories of you with them until the very end. This past weekend I learned something I never knew. When I was born, you went to a studio to record yourself singing. You sang a song for me. Throughout my entire life I have had this weird connection to a song that comes on every now and then. When I hear it, for some reason it always reminded me of you. I had a memory pop into my brain a little while back when you first started getting sick. You were singing that song at your wedding. I remembered it so vividly. Fast forward to this last Mother's dad, sitting there with all the wonderful women in our lives. Auntie said "Remeber when Randy cut that tape for Brianna when she was born? I remember it was the Keeper of The Stars." Boy oh boy did it take everything in me not to break down. That's the song dad. I only hear it in your voice & now I know why. I love you dad, to the moon & back. Until we meet again...<3

“ Brother life wouldn't have been as lively and fun and beautiful without you and it will never be the same. I'll miss your voice, charm, charisma, laughter, strength, and happiness. Ill miss you singing to me on my birthday, when i was down you'd change the lyrics to songs and custom them to make me laugh, send me texts all day and call a million times to update me sometimes on politics and sometimes some meaningless comedy, singing on road trips, we'd laugh and vent about our cray cray parents or plan who's turn it was to care for them, and we shared everything we had no questions asked. I remember momma worried about some crazy stuff you did and how dad was gonna kill ya 😭 . I think of all our wild travels statewide, fun days and nights, how you taught me to defend myself and got me into my first fight by throwing water at some girl and blaming me to make sure I was prepared for the real deal, children you gave me to love and even some bonus babies that became ours immediately, fast car rides in your Camaro going way over 100 and fishtailing, doing donuts, 4 wheeling, rides through the park on your motorcycle and when you took me over that tiny bridge on your dang bike, movies, drive-ins, our time in AZ and Montana, mountains, parties, drives around Colorado, fishing, bike rides and runs at the nature center, singing, dancing, etc. You never hesitated to take me with you anywhere, we were always just hanging out out and we validated each others craziness and chaos. We fought maybe 3-4 good times but forgave quickly and stood by during all the good and hard times. You settled down and tried your best as a family man and remained a good friend to all. After I had my baby you were her Papa and her world and she still calls for you everyday especially when she's mad at me or sad. You've been a brother, second father, Papo, and best friend to the end and I can't even begin to understand your presence not being here. I would go over just for a hug and comfort and not need to say a word just be in your presence. You sang in church, let my sisters pray with you, and even ministered just to marry your bonus babies and used every talent that the good lord blessed you with. Never perfect but perfectly amazing to our family. You taught me real love, forgiveness, and giving my all when I have it to give. I turned to you for protection when I needed it or advice. I can go on and on but sometimes thinking of you hurts so bad my heart gets heavy and I get a pain I never felt in my life without you here. I promise to my last breath I will fulfill your mission and gather everyone as much as possible. I'll watch over the ones that need it the most. I will stay in touch and I know although your on your new assignment that you haven't forgotten us and are still with us and will forever be a huge part of my heart. I'd be boring if I hadn't had your love. I think everyone in this world should experience a sibling like you. I wouldn't take it back had I known our time was limited, God bless and travel well big bro. I'd choose you over and over every single time. Forever gonna love you bro.....
